

Dance Educator Award

INTRODUCTION

Each year, the IADMS Dance Educator Award honors an outstanding educator or teacher who meaningfully integrates dance medicine and science into their teaching practice. Recipients of this award demonstrate a clear commitment to evidence-informed pedagogy, using scientific principles to shape their teaching strategies, content, and overall approach. Managed by the IADMS Professional Development & Recognition Committee, this award recognizes educators and teachers who, through their work, inspire and positively influence the next generation of dancers and dance educators.

The award recognizes a dance educator/teacher who:

- Thoughtfully integrates dance science and research into their teaching practice.
- Grounds their training approach or system of training on a robust knowledge of anatomy, physiology, psychology, and positive wellbeing.
- Balances artistic and pedagogical objectives, within an evidence-based framework, and continually evaluates and evolves their dance teaching practice.
- Demonstrate progressive and innovative thinking in their teaching - challenging and evolving traditional methods when appropriate.
- Inspires students and colleagues with their understanding, holistic teaching approach, and integration of dance science and research within their chosen dance genres and fields.
- Prioritizes the holistic wellbeing of dancers, fostering a safe and supportive environment - physically, emotionally, and psychologically.
- Shows a sustained commitment to advancing the fields of dance, dance science, and the mission of IADMS.

Responses to the nomination questions will inform the review process and may also be featured in future IADMS promotional materials.
